For something like five years now, the sweatshop on West 30th Street has been Cooney's main office, the place where he conducts his business when he isn't in a Catskills training camp or in some arena punching another heavyweight's ears off. Naturally, he knows all the regulars in Gleason's. His progress was slow as he pushed through the crowded aisle with two boxing rings at his left and the wall on his right, pausing to shake a hand here and thump a shoulder there. ("Hers," Mary Kay Blakely, April 9). Yes, we do agonize. I personally have agonized for three years. I have not gone a week in those three years without wondering if I was right, if my child would have been a boy or girl, if he would have had blue eyes. I cannot see a 3-year-old without asking myself if I have the right to study at a private university while his mother pushes a stroller and lives on welfare. The answer is always yes. "The salient characteristic of this mania," claims Thomas Wiseman in his book "The Money Motive" (Random House, 1974), "is the bestowal of one's love on something nonliving: it is the deflection of eros from a human object to an inanimate one." And who is the archetypal collector? Freud described him as miserly, pedantic, stubborn and obsessively tidy. Can these characterizations be true? Can the child's seemingly harmless stamp collection actually be the object of deflected eros? Can the reckless speculator who has just dropped a bundle on a Captain Video lunch pail be gripped by parsimony? Has the former sportsman who has taken to spending his precious weekends at auctions gone pedantic on us?	False	By Marilyn Bethany	1981-04-30	TX 677948
